SPEECH OF GRN. BUTLER.

At an early bour to-night a crowd gathered around the Mational, where Gen. Butler is stopping, their curl-sity thaving led them thither doubtless to see and hear Gen. Butler make a speech in response to the party who it was supposed would honor him with an instrumenta seronade. At twenty minutes past ten o'clock abou difteen hundred people were congregated in front of the National, and in the absence of any strains from the National, and in the absence of any strains from the band, loudly clamored for the appearance of General Butler. General Butler appeared finally, and said:

MY FRLOW CONTRYMEN—This is no time for making depeches. I have to thank you for this kind greeting. There is no reward for a public servant like that given to him by those who have a right to his services. For this flattering manifestation of your regard I beg you to accept my most heartfelt thanks.

Assong the reforms proposed by the Postmaster General is the removal of the present postage upon news-papers. As now-ordered, it is almost the only discrepancy in the prepaid system. A great reduction in a variety of rates on printed matter, and the abulition of all dis tinction of rates based upon different distances of trans portation of rates based upon different distances of trans-portation, and the adoption of decimal rates through-out, is recommended, but it is chiefly urged that either the present tariff upon the circulation of newspapers should be combined with the internal revenue tax upon cents instead of one upon all drop letters, and that all distinctions of rates of domestic letter postage as at present to California and the Pacific coast, should be all respects, and that the prepare description transmitted all letters and parcels of every description transmitted through the mails. It is expected also that uniformity will be introduced into the foreign postal system, by next, for the consideration of this subject.

The l'ostmaster of Washington will commence on Tues-day next receiving, and for thirty days thereafter, for redemption at his office, such soiled or defaced postage The hours for this business are from ten o'clock A. M. until two P. M. each week day, and application is to be made at room No. 18. CELEBRATION OF EMANCIPATION IN THE CONTRABAND

In the contraband camp on Thursday "Glory Hallelujah" was sung, and a colored preacher delivered a discourse from the twentieth chapter of "Begulations." Visitors were warned by a lisutenant not to enter the quarters because smalpox was prevalent there. The proclamation was the subject of much discussion. The contrabands treated it rather coolfy, because it leaves their brethren in Delaware, Matyland, Kanawha, Kentucky, Teanessee and Missouri in bondage.

The Porter Court Martial.

Washington, Jan. 3, 1863.

In the Porter Court Martial to-day, Lieutenant James Stephenson, of the Thirteenth New York, testified to the nature of the country between General Porter and Genearmy to the portion occupied by Coionel Marshall's Thir-teenth New York Volunteers, in front of General Porter. It was a rough, woody country, full of small ravines. It was not a country in which troops could be massed. He saw the enemy in front of his position. Judged the enemy's force to be from twelve to fitteen thousand. He was receiving reinforcements, judging from the direction of the clouds of dust. General Porter would have had to have passed through this broken country to have had to have passed through this broken country to have attacked the quemy's right. This would have exposed his own left flank. General Porter took, in his opinion, the best road to reach the enemy.

This witness was subjected to a rigid and searching cross examination by Judge Advocate Holt. In the course of it he said the length of the enemy's line was a mile. At this stage General Porter presented several despatch-es and papers bearing upon the case, amongst them the following despatch, to show the difference between the state of facts sworn to by Gon. Pope and as represent ed by him on the ground at the time the actions a Bull run took place, he having declared in court tha Jackson, and not Longstreet and D. H. Hill, alone op posed him. It is in evidence that the battle commenced after noon, and mainly in the evening:—

about six hundred, and was commanded by Col. i.ee.

The cavalry force of General Sigel's corps is not large, would intercept the rebels on their return.

A more important expedition was in charge of Colone Third division. This consisted of two hundred picket men from each of the regiments of Colond Schimmeltening's brigade, four pieces of artillery and about one hundred eavalry. We lett camp on Aquia creek, about eight miles from jumfries, an inne o'clock last evening, and proceeded by a circuitous route about twelve miles to a point three miles and a half from Dumfries in a north westerly direction. There we learned that the robels had passed that point a short time before. It was here that we had hoped to intercept them, and could easily have done so had the commander of the expedition had cavalry at his disposal instead of infantry, or had our cavalry properly co-operated with him as was expected. Colonel Schimmelfening had very little hope of being able to reach the place in time with the force, but he was a condition, that the state of the terms of the terms of the cave of the place in time with the force, but he was a condition that the was the results while the expedition, though maricesseful in its main objects, was as well executed as planned.

We tearned that the robels, probably commanded by General Stuart in person, had advanced in three columns tewards Dumfries, another force commanded by Hampton being behind; that after their repulse at that place they had returned by nearly the same roads as they advanced some few miles from town when they went northward. It was useless to attempt following coardly with infantry, and a request from Colone Candy, commanding our forces at this point that we should reinforce him brought us here. The rebels had learned of our advance, and they desisted from their attack on Dumfries undoubtedly from the cause, and moved further up to attack what they presumed to be the wester point.

A detacliment of the Sixth Cho cavalry was sent up by Colonel Schimmelfeung last night to advance to Dumfries and ascertain the position of things there. They encountered our pickets this side of town, and, supposing them to be rebels, drove them in, and, returning, re, orded that he rebels occupied Dumfries. A more serious mistake bappened with the pickets after they were driven basis, for they shot one of their own men who was returning to them.

bappened with the pickets after they were driven back, for they shot one of their own men who was returning to them.

The robets had left pickets on the roads near Dumfries, and some of them marrowly oscaped us, two, who were in a house, leaving behind their horses and equipments, asbres, pictole, bindises, and even their rations of army bleosit. We captured altogether seven prizoners, some of whom are soldiers, and others will probably prove what they represent themselves to be—private citizens. The inhabitants generally missols us for revels, and our soldiers bemored the mistake. We found everything free to us white we wire supposed to be "Southern soldiers," the women showing our wen where they could get feed for their horses, while they effered in saything they bad, regaling us monawhile with abuse of the Yan-Frees, and hoping that we would threat them sensity. The canonading at Dunffries was directly over the tewn, and several of the bouses show the marks of rebels shot and abell. Many of the inhabitants feel to their collars for safety, and they report that not a fow of our soldiers side the same. As a body, the force here behaved appeared the two differs and made desperate efforts to break our lines. The fight raged freem about half-past twelve o'clock to five a wock! F. M. A body of seventy cavalry, sent out as a partol, have not since been heard from, and it is feared they have been captured by the rebels.

The rebel ites must have been much more sewere than our own, as our artillery fire was more effective than theirs, and pertiens of their cavalry came two or three times under the fire of our infantry. They have left some their own surgions. It is presumed that they will conclude by this that the day of successful raids along this line has passed. The present expedition has certainly been so far almost bestiens, and will scarcely serve to keep up the prestige of General Programs.

BRUTAL CONDUCT OF A BARREEFSR.—Charles Shultz, a barkeeper in the saloon No. 109 Greenwich street, was arrested on Friday night, on a charge of assaulting one of injuring him severely. The complainant, it appears, was upable to pay for a round of drinks which he had called for, and offered his watch as security. The barkeeper

Nothing very definite is known as yet respecting the appointments of Messrs. Brennan and Develin. , These two appentments or messrs. Breinan and beveint. These two gentlemen manage to keep their own counsel remarkably well; in fact better than any two officials, with a like degree of patronage, ever did before in this city. All announcements of persons to receive this position or that position may, therefore, be regarded as mere conjectures. The opinion among persons who profess to be in the confidence of the newly elected Comparoller and Corporation Counsel is, that the following appointments will certainly be made: Comptroller-Wm. E. The fire originated in the cellar, and was caused in some way through the acts of the porter, Jacob Menges, who was mixing Jubricating oil, made of lard oil, whate oil and keroseve. Autority piece of intelligence has been made public during the last week, in which we have been led to supmose that the piratical commander of the rebel ality No. 290, overcome with removes and reckless of results, has easied twelve cases of fitters, and had resolved to end his day in their coppingtion. Facia that investigation have brought to ignit prove that the published letter of the pirate Raphael Semmes is a forgery; that the house that prejudis to have received it had none of their bitters on board of the Arist when she was seized; that it y a fair supposition that there is no such firm in existence in Panama as that of M Cordova & Ron, to whom it is asserted that these bitters were shipped, and that the whole remarkable discave production is full of eraggeralions, falschoods and unbiased assumptions.
